

SOUTH EAST LONDON

The South East of London is made up of the boroughs of Bromley, Greenwich, Bexley, Southwark and Lewisham. With its rich history as well as scattered green spaces, it's one of the most exciting parts of London!

Attractions include the maze of cobble streets in Greenwich to the warehouses and galleries along the river from London Bridge to Rotherhithe-let's not forget Borough Market for the foodies!

No other part of London is more diverse, see more for yourself here:

TATE MODERN

Tate Modern is a modern gallery located in the former Bankside Power Station in the Bankside area of the London Borough of Southwark. It is Britain's national gallery for international art and has art for everybody's taste, including pieces from 1990's to present day!

BOROUGH MARKET

Borough Market is one of the oldest food markets in London. The market is located near London Bridge and its claimed to have existed since 1014! You can find all sorts of exotic foods which include unusual cheeses, fresh fruit, pastries and even fresh oysters!

BOY GEORGE!!

Boy George, the British singer and song writer was born in Eltham, Greenwich! Greenwich is a world heritage site and is a major attraction for tourists on the weekend. It has lovely parks, great riverside restaurants and a local market. Fun for everybody!

EMG-SOUTH EAST LONDON

For more information with regards to the South East of London as well as more information with regards to the wonderful schools and job opportunities within these schools, please contact Megan Knowles at Education Matters Group.

